About me

I worked as a proofreader for a large law publishers before qualifying as a solicitor in London in 1995.

In 2000 I set up my own dot com business. This was my first experience of writing for the web. Since then I have written websites, magazine articles, PR materials, brochures, reports, technical manuals, SEO articles, and blogs for clients in diverse sectors from financial services and accounting to internet dating, and complementary therapies.

In 2009 I took an MA in Creative Writing and Personal Development at the University of Sussex and I now run workshops in creative and professional writing.

I am an associate of the Society for Editors and Proofreaders.

How I can help

My approach is based on two unshakeable beliefs:

1. Everyone can write, but they don't always have the time
2. Everyone knows what they want to say, but not always how to say it

So I am happy to give you as much or as little support as you need for your writing project. This can include:

- Helping you decide what you want to say and how
- Writing clear, effective words from scratch
- Editing and polishing your own words
- Checking drafts and proofreading before publication
